9:00-10:00 AM Consumer Panel: What Does Clean Label Mean?

Go Clean Label partnered with the supply chain and sustainability experts at Brisán and the consumer research specialists at Product Dynamics to hear directly from consumers. This live qualitative consumer panel addresses the many facets of clean label in an open-ended Q&A format with 6-8 consumers.

The insights from this symposium are tremendously valuable for R&D, marketing and business teams — and a must for any company with their pulse on innovation.

Chicago Section IFT Suppliers' Clean Label Symposium

10:05-10:45 AM What do the New Food Labels Mean to Dairy?

The Food and Drug Administration has issued final rules regarding revisions to Nutrition and Supplement Facts Labels, servings sizes among other updates.

This presentation provides insight as to what these changes mean using the dairy foods category as an example.

Jen Houchins
National Dairy Council

10:50-11:30 AM Clean Label—Why This Trend is Important Now

Everyone seems to be talking about clean label, and there seem to be as many definitions as there are companies offering clean label.

This presentation looks at all the different ways "clean label" appears in the market, what consumers think, and where it seems to be going.

Lynn Dornblaser

Dr. Darin Detwiler, LP.D
Northeastern University
College of Professional Studies
Regulatory Affairs of Food & Food Industry

11:35-12:30 PM Today's Consumers—Tomorrow's Labels

Perhaps nothing reflects consumers' interests and behaviors more than labels on food packaging. What do consumers want? What do they need? How do they use the product (or not)? Also — how have consumers been impacted by food? How have they impacted food?

This presentation takes a broad look at several key changes in food labels over the past 25 years not only from the academic perspective, but also from the perspective of the consumer who has played a role in creating and gaining federal mandates for labels. Dr. Detwiler will discuss burden of disease, transparency, industry opposition, and other considerations behind past and future label issues. Dr. Detwiler will also share case studies and data from a variety of stakeholders.

November 1, 2017

Dear Attendees, Exhibitors and Guests,

On behalf of all of us here at Chicago Section IFT let me welcome you to Chicago and the 2017 Chicago Section IFT Suppliers' Night! The nation's largest regional food technology event!

We are pleased to be celebrating our 55th Suppliers' Night since the inception of the Chicago Section. From just eleven exhibitors at our first event to 552 exhibitors and 3,000+ attendees tonight, the CSIFT Suppliers' Night has grown to become a "must do" event on the calendar of the U.S. food industry. We are pleased you could join us here today.

For 2017 we present a symposium focused on one of the most challenging issues to face the U.S. food industry: the clean label movement.

At 9:00AM join Theresa Cantafio from Go Clean Label, Judy Lindsey from Product Dynamics and Brian Vogt from BRISAN for the consumer panel "What Does Clean Label Mean?" Go Clean Label collaborated with the supply chain and sustainability experts at BRISAN and the consumer research specialists at Product Dynamics to hear directly from the consumer. This live qualitative consumer panel addresses the many facets of clean label in a Q&A style format. The take-aways from this symposium will be of value to R&D, M&S and food industry business teams

At 10:05AM join Jen Houchins from National Dairy Council for "What Do The New Food Labels Mean For Dairy." The FDA has issued its final rules regarding revisions to Nutrient & Supplement Facts Labels, servings sizes and other updates. This presentation provides insight as to what these changes mean using the dairy foods category as an example.

At 10:50AM join Lynn Dornblaser from MINTTEL for "Clean Label – Why This Trend Is Important Now." While everyone seems to be talking about clean label there seem to be as many definitions as there are companies offering clean label solutions. This presentation looks at all the different ways "clean label" appears in the market, what consumers think, and the direction clean label seems to be taking.

At 11:35AM join Dr. Darin Detwiler, LP.D from Northwestern University for "Today's Consumers – Tomorrows Labels." Perhaps nothing reflects consumers' interests and behaviors more than labels on food packaging. What do consumers want? What do they need? How do they use the product (or not)? Also, how have consumers been impacted by food? How have consumers impacted food? This presentation takes a broad look at several key changes in food labels over the past 25 years.

The Expo will begin promptly at Noon and run to 5:30PM. Once again we have more than 550 exhibitors here this evening offering you the latest in leading food ingredients, processing technologies, laboratory equipment and other products and services.

Suppliers' Night will conclude with our Social Hour from 5:30PM to 6:30PM. Please take a moment to gather with us in the registration area to socialize with peers, enjoy the refreshments and bring Suppliers' Night to a close.

Now, Go Enjoy The Day!

Sincerely,

James N. Anderson

The Real Blueberries™ Seal

Real Blueberries + Great Products = Happy Customers!

Got real blueberries in your product? Tell consumers with the Real Blueberries™ Seal. The 2,437 highbush blueberry growers in 32 states invite you to join Team Blueberry! Qualifying is simple. There is no cost. It's a great way to benefit from the popularity of real blueberries.

Big-time Blueberry Demand.

Since the 1990s when news about the health benefits of blueberries first gained momentum, US per-capita use of fresh and frozen blueberries in the USA has increased more than 500%. Consumers crave fresh and frozen blueberries all year round. A typical comment, "I have blueberries daily to get my antioxidants!" Make sure customers know they are getting products with lots of real blueberries inside.

Blueberries Everywhere!

Hundreds of new blueberry-containing products are launched each year – 925 in 2016. These include: baking, confectionery, dairy, snacks, pet foods, natural cosmetics and others. Blueberries: fresh, frozen, dried, liquid, purée, powder... contribute to product popularity on the supermarket shelf. Most products contain adequate or optimal amounts of real blueberries. The Real Blueberries™ Seal tells customers – this is the real deal!

Interested?

- Take a photo of your blueberry product and ingredient statement for our team to review. Send to realblueberries@blueberrytech.org.
- If the product is approved, we will send you a simple agreement. If not, we can provide tips on how to optimize blueberry content.
- Once accepted, we will send the seal artwork ready to include on your package.
- You are now part of Team Blueberry!

US Highbush Blueberry Council

The US Highbush Blueberry Council (USHBC) is an agriculture, research and promotions group comprised of farmers, processors and importers of highbush blueberries.

RAISINS.

The Natural Way to Add Sweetness... Not Sugar.

Visit Booths
#755/757

What's the healthiest way to add sweetness to the products your customers love? Sun-Maid raisins — not sugar. That's because raisins have a lower glycemic index than sugar making raisins the healthy choice for diabetics¹. Raisins are also gluten free and their natural tartaric acid helps enhance the flavors in sauces and salsas. They can even replace brown sugar or molasses in BBQ sauces. Sun-Maid raisins and raisin products — the natural way to sweeten your sales.

¹Amin Esfahani, Joanne Lam and Cyril W. C. Kendall (2014). Acute effects of raisin consumption on glucose and insulin responses in healthy individuals. Journal of Nutritional Science, 3, e1 doi:10.1017/jns.2013.33 <http://journals.cambridge.org/action/displayAbstract?fromPage=online&aid=9145963>
